

TESTIMONY OF GANGSTERS 'FRAMED,' MRS. BECKER SAYS

Stories of Schepps, Webber and Others Worthless as Evidence Because Evidently Agreed On Beforehand, Defendant's Wife Declares.

Mrs. Charles Becker, the slight little woman with the quick, perceptive eyes and firm mouth, who has sat day after day in Justice Goff's court and heard the four witnesses, Rose, Webber, Vallon and Schepps, attempting to swear her husband's life away, still believes, as implicitly as she did before Lieut. Becker was put on trial, in the happy outcome of his ordeal.

To-day, in an interview with the reporters in attendance upon the trial, Mrs. Becker discussed at length her beliefs as to the weight of the testimony the State seeks to pile up against her husband.

"I am afraid I am not of a sentimental or romantic turn of mind," she said, "and that what I might have said about the trial of my husband will not be of interest to any one. You see, I have carefully weighed the evidence as it has been given and though I may be said to have a bias—what wife wouldn't in similar circumstances—I think my opinion must be, in a great measure, the opinion of others who have been there to see the trial.

"The testimony of Rose, Vallon, Webber and Schepps, of course, did not surprise me. I had read so much of what they have already said in the newspapers that nothing new was developed by them, so far as I could see. I was quite prepared for what they said. They swore to lies on the stand. I think the jury will find the testimony of Sam Schepps destroyed whatever value there might have been in the evidence given by the other three. Schepps was manifestly so eager to protect himself as to be led into a ridiculous position.

"It was, of course, to be expected that these four men would corroborate each other. They are actuated by the desire for life and liberty—the greatest spur in the world. They have had ample opportunity to confer together, with the aid of the keenest counsel, so that their stories will dovetail into one another. But, by their admissions on the stand, their evidence is destroyed in

WIDOW OF ROSENTHAL SWEARS BECKER SAID RAID CANCELLED DEBT

She tossed her head in the air, smiled compassionately and shot back her answers without a moment's hesitation. She spoke somewhat brokenly, but slowly, distinctly and emphatically.

When Mr. McIntyre asked the girl if she knew Becker had a home, she grinned broadly and replied: "I never asked him." Jury and spectators laughed at Mr. McIntyre's discomfort and the witness fixed her grin and held it.

Here Miss Storer was excused and Edward E. Coe of No. 215 West Fifty-first street, an actor, was called. Q. Did you ever see Lieut. Becker in Mr. Rose's home? A. Yes. Either late in April or early in May. Q. What were you all doing? A. We were at breakfast together. We were at table about an hour. I think I saw him twice at Mr. Rose's home at breakfast.

There was no cross-examination. Bernard Rudiger of No. 48 West Thirty-sixth street, a waiter at the Union Square Hotel, was called. He swore he knew both Becker and Rose. Q. How did you happen to know Becker? A. By an expression he used on the first day I saw him.

The witness saw Becker and Rose together three or four times last March and April. They came into the hotel together, generally at five in the afternoon, but sometimes in the morning. They sat in the back dining room at a side table—mostly at a corner table behind the bar.

SAYS HE SAW ROSE PASS MONEY TO BECKER. Q. Did you see money pass between Becker and Rose? A. Yes. Twice I saw Jack Rose pass money to Becker.

Q. How much? A. I could not see. This was the first time any person had ever told positively of the passage of money between Becker and his graft collector, and the waiter's testimony straightforwardly given, made a deep impression on Becker.

On cross-examination by Mr. McIntyre, Rudiger said he was born in Germany.

Q. Did you have trouble with Lieut. Becker in the Union Square Hotel? A. I did.

Q. You did not like Lieut. Becker? A. I did not dislike him. I simply did not like a remark he made.

SECOND WAITER SAW ROSE AND BECKER TOGETHER. Frank Scell, a waiter at the Union Square Hotel, said he knew both Rose and Becker and that he had waited on them together many times in the Union Square.

Q. How long before the murder of Rosenthal did you last see them together? A. Just one week before he was killed. They were in the rear dining room an hour and a half.

Scell said he had been seven times to the District-Attorney's office, but denied that he had rehearsed his story on each of those occasions.

Jack Rose, immaculately clad in a handsome new brown suit, was brought into the courtroom and confronted by the witness.

"Is that the man you know as Jack Rose?" demanded Mr. Moss.

"It is," said Scell.

"Your Honor," said Mr. Moss, "may we ask a recess? We have expedited the case as rapidly as possible and expect to close this afternoon."

At 1:30 recess was taken until 2:30. DEFENSE GETS READY TO PRESENT ITS SIDE.

With the prospect for an early close of the State's case, the defense attorneys busied themselves during the luncheon recess preparing to begin their defense. Chief Counsel McIntyre declared he had thirty witnesses to call and that he believed it would require five days to hear them all. AT COLD CAUSE HEADACHE AND GRIEVANCE BRUISED. McIntyre's long speech, which was expected to last for several days, caused a headache and a bruise on his forehead. He was expected to last for several days.

A. I do not think it is.

The paper was marked for identification, but not read, and a second document was handed him, on which he identified his signature. This, too, was marked for identification.

Q. Where did you get the paper on which you made the notes of the Becker case? A. In prison in the Tombs. (The paper on which the notes were made and the other paper on which Hallon was not sure of his signature, seemed identical in size and color.)

Q. Did Becker speak to you in the Tombs and ask you what about that article in the newspapers? A. No. Q. Did he ask whether you made a statement in the newspapers? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you say to Becker that you overheard nothing and that you gave out no statement? A. I said part of that; part of it I did not.

Q. Did you say to Becker, "If any statement such as that appears in the papers as having come from me it is not my statement"? A. I do not recall that I said that.

Q. Did you write such a communication to Becker? A. I did not. Q. Did you cause such a communication to be sent to Becker? A. No.

WITNESS ADMITS CASHING A BOGUS CHECK.

The witness admitted that he had cashed a bogus check for $50 at Brokers and that it was for that crime he was now in Sing Sing.

Mr. McIntyre asked that indictment against Haller fourteen years ago and in 1900 and 1901 be produced by the Clerk of the Court. Justice Goff replied that he did not think it was necessary to delay the trial to that extent.

Becker's counsel then read off a long list of alleged complaints against the witness.

"I am sorry," responded the Prosecutor, "but I have no such complaints, and, therefore, cannot produce them."

McIntyre started an argument, but the Court cut him short.

The District-Attorney has answered and that is sufficient," said the Judge.

Q. Where was White and where was Becker at the time of the conversation you say you heard? A. Just inside the bath.

Q. Where were you? A. In the other shower bath, right alongside them.

Q. Describe this other man? A. I have no idea what he looked like. I only paid attention to Becker—not to the other man.

Q. Was the conversation carried on in a loud tone of voice? A. Not loud, but very distinct.

Q. How soon did you make your memorandum? A. Within an hour.

Q. When Delaney Nicol was District Attorney, were you convicted of forgery in the second degree? A. I was not.

(Mr. McIntyre looked further at the indictment he held in his hand and for the first time learned that Hallon had really been acquitted. He promptly begged Hallon's pardon, which the prisoner graciously granted.)

PRESIDENT SPEEDS IN FLYING AUTO TO CATCH TRAIN

Police Escort Helps Taft Smash Traffic Regulations on Fifth Avenue.

With motorcycle policemen preceding, flanking and following his car and with an automobile load of Secret Service men and Central Office detectives trailing on behind, President Taft rode in record breaking time to-day from the Holland House to the Grand Central Station. He left the Holland House at 9:15 o'clock and at that moment the Boston Express, via Springfield, on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad was due to leave the Grand Central Station.

The train was held for nine minutes. In that period of time the President negotiated the distance between the Holland House and the Grand Central Station and made his way down through the passageways to the private car attached to the rear of the train.

Owing to the attempt on the life of Col. Roosevelt in Milwaukee extraordinary precautions were taken to protect President Taft during his stay in this city and the police officials heaved sighs of relief when he was gone.

The President breakfasted in the public dining room of the Holland House with his wife, his brother, Charles, his daughter and Mrs. Taft's sister, Mrs. Loughlin, of Pittsburgh. The conversation between the President and his brother was so absorbing that no attention was paid to train time.

When the Taft party was reminded that the Boston Express left at 9:15 there was a great deal of scurrying about. A telephone message was sent to the station asking that the train be held.

The President and his wife, on their way from the door of the hotel to the automobile passed through a guard of half a dozen policemen. Secret Service men and detectives watchfully weaved among the persons standing near. Two Secret Service men got into the car with the President and his wife. Seven other members of the Secret Service and Detective Bureau boarded another car. Ten motorcycle policemen were on hand to act as an escort.

The situation was explained to Sergeant Sam Johnson in charge of the motorcycle squad. He gave orders that for the time being traffic regulations were suspended. With the horns of the motorcycles and automobiles honking continuously, President's party rode a swift way up crowded Fifth avenue and across to the station.

In passing from the street level to the train platform President Taft and his party used a freight elevator. Conspicuously posted in the elevator was this sign:

"Passengers Riding in This Elevator Do So at Their Own Risk."

OPPOSE GERMAN OIL DEAL.

BERLIN, Oct. 16.—Fear that the proposed petroleum monopoly under the auspices of the German government was a one-sided arrangement unduly favoring the interests of the Deutsche Bank was the cause of their refusal to enter the syndicate according to a statement authorized by the Dresdner Bank, the Disconto Gesellschaft and Bleichroeder Bank to-day.

The three banks declare it to be untrue that their refusal was inspired by their relations with the Standard Oil Company. On the contrary, they say they have offered to cancel their contracts with that concern and to enter the monopoly company and withdraw only when the syndicate refused to give the necessary guarantees for equality of treatment.

"I Don't Know Where I'm Going, but I'm On My Way!"

And that's the way with a few short-sighted housekeepers who start out, unguided, after a suitable house, room or apartment in which to spend the cold winter months.

Not so, however, with those who go house-hunting with World ads. as a guide.
